About the College

Egra Sarada Shashi Bhusan College started its' journey on 8th August in the year 1968, located at the south - end of the state of West Bengal under the grace of some education lovers of locality led by Prof Dulal Chandra das, who was the founder Principal of the College, after having affiliation from the university of Calcutta with a dream to spread the higher education amongst the local students who did not have the opportunity for higher education and thus could not contribute their best to the nation's cause. Presently with affiliation from Vidyasagar University, Rabindra Bharati University (Distance Education) and Netaji Subhas Open University, The College is Running different Postgraduate and Undergraduate and Vocational Courses.

About the Department of Botany

The department of Botany was established in the year of 2001 with the B.Sc. General course under Vidyasagar University to fulfill the demand of local student's. In 2008, this department started Honours course in Botany affiliated under Vidyasagar University. The department is situated on the ground floor of the Science building. This department is equipped with laboratories and other essential instruments and modern teaching aids. We have a departmental library to enrich both the faculty and student's of the department the traditional field as well as in the area conjugated through new research activities in different fields.

Two fulltime professor, four SACT, Lecturer and one Laboratory attendant are engaged in the activities of teaching and monitoring the students both in Theoretical and Practical classes.

The Department is running by degree of B.Sc in Botany (Hons & General) under CBCS curriculum introduced by Vidyasagar University.

About the seminar

Taxonomy is the science of grouping organisms into different categories according to their physical characters. This grouping, or classification, should be based on homology i.e. the individuals gathered in the same group must shared characteristics that have been inherited from a common ancestor. Thus, to study the modern trends in taxonomy we must go through the history of classification and how this branch has developed with the development of peoples, instruments and techniques. We must keep in our minds that taxonomy today is a reflection of the past, meanwhile the systems of classification reflect both needs, level of knowledge, philosophical concepts and available technology of each historical period. Modern taxonomists consider that the gross morphological characters are not always sufficient to provide means of differentiation in determining the genetical and evolutionary relationship between taxa. To achieve this the taxonomical evidences from anatomy, embryology, palynology, cytology, palaeobotany, ecology, bio-chemistry etc. are discussed. Taxonomy is the science of the description and classification of organisms, essential in theoretical and applied biology. About 1.7 million species have been named since Linnaeus and it is estimated that only around 5-10% of the world's biota has been described so far, and, obviously, taxonomy plays the major role in this sense. However, taxonomy is in crisis: funding for taxonomy is inadequate; there is a lack of taxonomists, the recruitment of young scientists into taxonomy and systematics is extremely low, the impact factor of taxonomical journals is very low, and taxonomists have not been able to get the society and other disciplines concerned about the importance of taxonomy. Fortunately, during the last years, several progresses are emerging. The general interest about biodiversity conservation, the advances of internet and web pages, the progress in molecular techniques, the development of statistics in phylogeny, and the new taxonomic funding initiatives and global projects are giving some light: taxonomy is getting fashionable again and topics like Phylocode and Bar Coding are among the most controversial and discussed subjects in taxonomy today. This study represents a major summary about modern trends in taxonomy, and the main concepts and topics in taxonomy today are revised.

Key - themes

1. Taxonomy Molecular Systematics.
2. Taxonomy and Ecology.
3. Medicinal Plant Research.
4. Environmental Botany.
